1928 killer hurricane devastated families

Editor's note: This is the third in a series on life in the early Glades published in serial form. The series is based on the recollections of C.A. "Mutt" Thomas as written by Ruth S. Irvin. This work, originally completed June 20, 1978, is published here by permission of the C.A. "Mutt" Thomas family.

WE RETURN TO THE GLADES

The hurricane of 1926 killed the boom and a month or so later we returned to the Glades. Daddy moved us back in the Model T and the truck.

We went down U.S. 1 to Lake Worth then west to Military Trail. We went north on Military Trail and crossed the West Palm Beach Canal and took the road down the canal to Twenty Mile Bend, as we do today. We crossed and followed the rock road to Belle Glade and on to South Bay. The road to Lake Harbor was a muck road. From there, we then took the muck road on to Sebring Farm. The move took all day. We rented a house from Mr. James. It was located where my shop stands today. Vernie Boots' family lived nearby. Mr. Boots was farming, too. He and his boys had a contract to keep the muck road from South Bay to Clewiston leveled off.

H.O. Sebring, son of the founder of Sebring, Florida, bought the land and started Sebring Farm in 1918. He planned to have the biggest avocado farm of all. He cleared 200 acres of custard apple land and planted the trees but the floods in 1922, 1924 and 1926 killed the trees. The hurricane coming up in 1926 was destined to put a final end to this enterprise.

On the farm there were seven houses for white people and quarters for the colored. We called the house we rented in 1927 the "wrong side of the house" because it had never been finished on the side. Now, my father was again farming on Rattle Island with Uncle Mays. They went back and forth in a 16 foot boat to work the land.

Mr. Sebring had a canal dug from the Miami Canal in the Lake to the land at Sebring Farms. He could bring his own supplies in the boat. I had a pump, run by a steam boiler, to pump a water off the land. He had to throw pine wood to fire the boiler.

Mayaca bridge being replaced

PORT MAYACA --

The draw bridge crossing the St. Lucie Canal at Port Mayaca will be eliminated sometime next year when the state opens up a new two-lane bridge about 50 yards to the west of the old bridge.

The new bridge will create a 65 feet clearance over the canal, allowing boats to pass underneath it.

The job, scheduled for completion in September 1984, will cost $6,053,673.88, according to a Florida Department of Transportation district director.

League considers special tax district

By JEFF BROWN

PAHOKEE -- The Tri-City League, meeting in Pahokee Monday night, January 17, discussed the possibility of creating a special taxing district to fund studies aimed at getting special status for the Glades area.

The three municipalities in the League, Pahokee, Belle Glade and South Bay, all face restrictions from state, county and federal agencies due to regulations that don't take into account the special nature of the Glades, said several of the officials in attendance at the meeting.

Most of the local problems have come recently from the state Department of Environment Regulation, according to the testimony.

"It's not that we're opposed to complying to regulations," said South Bay Mayor Don Tanner.

Police get the dirty rat...

Suspect dies of overdose

By JEFF BROWN

BELLE GLADE -- A special investigation of marijuana from the disappearance of a man from the Belle Glade police station drew to a close earlier this month when the prime suspect was discovered dead in the closet from which he was believed to be stealing the material.

According to Detective John R. Carney, who was heading up the one-man team investigating the incident, "Pothead" was discovered dead in the closet, January 3, bringing the four-week investigation to an abrupt halt. Carney had been investigating the disappearance of marijuana from the storage closet since early December.

The closet is used to store evidence police confiscate in their investigations.

He had suspected "Pothead," a brown mouse, from the beginning, and said he believed he was close to apprehending him when he discovered the suspect dead in the closet.

Carney had entered the closet with a live trap that he hoped would aid him in apprehending the suspect, but "Pothead" was lying dead on the shelf in a pile of loose marijuana.

He confirmed that "Pothead's" death was due to an overdose, "said Carney. "I'm devastated. We had a camaraderie, you know.

If he had succeeded in apprehending his suspect, Carney had previously announced plans to keep the mouse in captivity and put him through a drug rehabilitation program.

He never got the chance. "Pothead" went after one too many and expired before Carney could do anything to save him.

Pothead was buried behind the old city hall on Avenue A. His body was placed in a round plastic bottle and interred inside a modest graveside ceremony.

His age is undetermined. According to Carney, "Pothead's" death officially closes the investigation.

Bridge tender era draws to a close at Port Mayaca

By JEFF BROWN

PORT MAYACA -- Frank Davis sits in the small building on the south end of the bridge watching television, listening for a signal from approaching boats and scanning the canal in both directions.

On his right, traffic passes back and forth over the bridge. To his left, he can see the construction crews building a new bridge that, in September of 1984, will make his job obsolete.

Davis, a Pahokee resident, is one of four or five drawbridge operators who do their time in Port Mayaca swinging the bridge open and shut over the St. Lucie Canal.

"I don't know very much about it," he said. "I haven't been at it very long. Only about a year. Some of the older guys could probably tell you more."

None of the older members of the crew were on duty.

Davis said he listens for signals from approaching boats. When he hears one, he opens the bridge. He also has to watch for the boats because the signal isn't always audible.

"Sometimes, the wind starts to blow," he said. "If a boat is coming from, let's say the lake, and the wind is blowing the other way, you can't always hear the signal."

There are times he can't open the bridge because of a mechanical breakdown or because the road traffic is too heavy. Then the boat travelers have to wait.

He said eight or nine boats usually pass through in a day this time of year.

There isn't much to the job, he said. Open the bridge, close the bridge and try to avoid accidents.

He considers avoiding accidents one of the major parts of the job. To the south of the bridge, SR 76 dead ends into 441, and when he closes the bridge after a boat passes through, he allows the northbound traffic to

Plane crashes at BG airport

BELLE GLADE -- Two

passengers in a twin engine Cessna escaped injury Monday, January 17, when the plane's landing gear failed to operate properly and the plane skidded during a landing at the Belle Glade Airport.

According to Officer Aurelio Rodriguez, the plane, piloted by William H. Wolcott, 27, of West Palm Beach, skidded 259 feet after touching down on the east end of the east-west runway,

The left landing gear, which had been lowered, collapsed. The crash resulted in an estimated $3,000 damage.

Wolcott and the owner of the airplane, William Green, West Palm Beach, who was a passenger, were not injured.

End of an era

Canal traffic will pass over the one-lane bridge first to avoid traffic problems at that junction. How do you handle drivers who race across the bridge when the sign is flashing and confusing?

"I know what you mean. Not too much of that," he said. "I just let them go as fast as they can. I can't open up away from the bridge."

About 100 yards to the west of the old bridge, the state is currently constructing a new bridge scheduled for completion in September 1994.

The bridge will be high enough to allow canal traffic to pass under it, thus eliminating the need for a draw bridge or its operator.

"Yeah, they (Florida DOT) said they're going to take the old one out," said Davis. "They said they're going to transfer me. I hope to get something in west Palm Beach County otherwise, I'll be back in Martin. That wouldn't be bad. It would be farther away. I might have to go to Stuart."

A BULLDOZER operator moves the earth at Port Mayaca, where the state is building a two-lane, 65-foot high bridge to cross the St. Lucie Canal.

Tri-City—

W.E. "Tom" Strang, Belle Glade City Manager, asked how it was possible for the county department of health to overrule DER decisions, and asked why both agencies had to have separate reviews of projects. He suggested that each agency review projects jointly, streamlining the approval process for municipalities.

Tanner said many of the DER's objections to projects in the area stem from regulations designed for areas with environments more similar to the rest of the nation than the Glades.

He said the state hires people "fresh out of college" who fail to make exceptions to rules fashioned for areas with less unique circumstances, such as the organic muck soil in the Glades.

"Maybe we should hire somebody out of college to represent us," he said.

"You need to talk about the Glades area as the Glades area," agreed Strang. "This is a unique part of the country."

Bailey said exceptions and special status could be gained, but the studies needed to influence the state regulatory agencies are expensive. He suggested the cities may want to examine the possibility of funding those studies by establishing a special taxing district encompassing the incorporated and unincorporated areas of western Palm Beach County.

He said such a taxing district could be created by the county commission, but admitted that it would be dependent upon the county commission then.

The state legislature could also establish a special taxing district that would be independent of the county commission.

Pahokee Councilman Ronnie Graydon asked if it would be in the area's best interest to create a taxing district dependent on the county.

"You may not want it, but it may be the only way to go without a legislative act," said Bailey.

"The local people that benefit should control it," said Graydon.

"You could have an advisory board made up of the Tri-City League or what have you," suggested Bailey. "It would be sort of hard to go against their advice."

Bailey stopped short of endorsing or even proposing the creation of a taxing district for studies, though, saying it was a matter to be discussed by the cities' officials.

"I'm not proposing that unless the cities do," he said.

If such a taxing district was set up for funding studies to prove the special nature of the Glades, the tax would probably be a millage rate attached to the annual tax notice, said Bailey. Any proposal for a new district must be adopted by the county prior to July 1 so the county Property Appraiser's office could include it in its calculations.

Pride's take-over of GCI hits snag, June solution seen

BELLE GLADE -- PRIDE Inc.'s take-over of the industries at Glades Correctional Institution has hit a snag in state law that is expected to be cleared up by June.

According to GCI Superintendent Robert Turner, the state attorney general has determined that the statute permitting PRIDE to sell what it produces at the state correctional facilities has to be reworded. That rewording must be passed by the state legislature.

Legislative leaders have assured Turner and Governor Bob Graham that the necessary legislation should pass both houses rather easily after the legislature opens its session in April.

Turner also said that, in the absence of the necessary law changes, United States Sugar Corporation is discing and planting seed cane in plots at 20 Mile Bend Ranch and adjacent to the GCI facility north of Belle Glade.

The governor had approved that planting to prevent PRIDE from sitting out one full cane season after its take over becomes official and in the anticipation that the necessary changes to the law will pass.

PRIDE is scheduled to take over the industries February 1.

The discing and planting of seed cane involves about 150 acres at the two sites.

About 3,000 acres will eventually be turned over to PRIDE. The land at 20 Mile Bend Ranch is currently used for cattle.

Turner said the cattle will be disposed of through the market as soon as the situation warrants and makes it possible.

USCC is currently planting seed cane at no obligation, said Turner.

Three alternatives are at USCC's disposal concerning the seed cane.

PRIDE will enter into an agreement with a major agricultural company after it takes control of all the industries at GCI. If that company is USCC, USCC will receive the products of the seed cane it planted.

If USCC is not the contract company, it will be reimbursed by the company that does receive the contract.

If the necessary rewording of the state statute isn't passed this year, USCC will write the planting off as a donation to the governing agency, either PRIDE or the state.

Man charged with possession, intent to sell

BELLE GLADE -- A local man was arrested on narcotics charges Wednesday evening, January 12 after a police officer observed him discard suspicious substances at a local bar.

Patrolman L.D. Grieve had just entered the Little Harlem Bar at 517 SW Avenue B Place at about 9:30 p.m. when he observed Jimmy Lee Brown, 29, of 609 SW Seventh Street, place what Grieve suspected to be a marijuana cigarette and a matchbox on a mailbox inside the doorway.

Brown then walked by Grieve on his way out the door, according to the report.

Grieve recovered the items he saw Brown discard and discovered foil packets of what he thought was cocaine inside the matchbox.

He pursued Brown, apprehending him at the Ace Theatre at 236 SW Fifth Street.

Brown was taken to the police station where a search allegedly uncovered $2,200 in $1, $10, $20, $50 and $100 bills in his pants pockets.

Another $44 was discovered in his hands.

Brown was charged with possession of cocaine with intent to sell and possession of less than 20 grams of marijuana.

Detective Normand Hevey is in charge of the case.

Parking dispute results in knifing

BELLE GLADE -- A dispute between two men over the parking of one of a van in the front yard of their dwelling came to blows early this week, resulting in the arrest of one on assault charges and a matchbox on the cutting of the other.

Tony Baptiste, 28, of 240 SW Third Street, had apparently requested that Douglas Antrobus, 24, of the same address, discontinue his practice of parking his van on the front lawn of the residence.

When Antrobus continued the practice, Baptiste apparently drove a post in the ground and drove nails through it to discourage Antrobus from parking his vehicle there.

Antrobus allegedly parked in the same spot despite the post

Sunday, January 16, and the nails in the post damaged his van.

An argument ensued between the two and Antrobus took a can knife and started trying to flatten or remove the nails in the post.

Baptiste claimed that Antrobus at that point attacked him with the knife, striking him on the wrist. He turned to run and Antrobus hit him twice in the back.

Antrobus claimed that he cut Baptiste only after Baptiste attacked him.

After the incident,

Antrobus went to the police station and reported that he had cut Baptiste with a cane knife. Patrolman Aurelio Rodriguez went to the SW Third Street address and was informed that Baptiste had already gone to Glades General for treatment.

Baptiste had received a six inch cut to his right wrist, a six inch cut to the right upper back and an eight inch cut to the left buttocks.

Antrobus was charged with aggravated assault, according to the report.

Salad bowl gets national attention

BELLE GLADE -- The Belle Glade Jubilee Committee's tentative plans to create a giant salad bowl during the mid-April festival may not be so tentative.

Since the committee's January 7 meeting, the salad bowl has received attention in the press across the nation.

Reports on the bowl have been broadcast from as far away as Iowa, according to several members of the committee.

Jewel Crane, the executive secretary of the Belle Glade Chamber of Commerce, said she and the chairman of the Black Gold Jubilee Committee, Rupert "Bubba" Mock, Jr., have been interviewed by several radio stations, and have also received inquiries and offers of assistance from individuals who have heard of the attempt to create a giant salad bowl.

One organization in New York offered to loan the committee a giant bowl it used to create an apple pie, she said.

Another man called and asked about the possibility of showing his giant cooker at the festival.

The committee has been considering creating a giant salad bowl to receive broad attention for the annual jubilee.

Several obstacles have cropped up in their pursuit of that plan, such as the amount of vegetables needed and how the salad would be kept fresh.

The availability of some vegetables could also hinder the committee in creating the salad.

At its January 7 meeting, the committee discussed the possibility of growing the vegetables on a special plot.

Old Red's a sly old puss

This is a column about "Old Red." He hasn't done anything to warrant more than a word or two — except to survive. Still, in the world of alley cats, I suppose that in itself is quite an achievement.

In his case, it sure is. Maybe in his youth he was a cute little ginger-furred ball of vigor and mischief, but as an old cat he is lean and lanky, scruffy and scarred. He's the kind of cat you'd expect to spit tobacco juice.

Somehow and some time ago, Old Red passed himself off as an attack cat; a snappy catcher of rats. He has the audacity, I'm sure, to have claimed he could keep alligators away, too, and there are mornings he looks like he'd tangled with nothing less.

So either by persistence or prevarication, Red tingled himself into the post of yard cat at our house in exchange for a bowl of breakfast and indisputable squatters' rights to nap in a porch swing.

But his real swinging, of course, was done at night. Old Red is a brawler, or was, anyway. Some mornings he's looked so battered you'd think he'd been brought home in an ambulance. For two days he'd lie just outside death's door waiting to see if he'd won or lost on the gamble for his ninth life. The odds were narrow to a fraction, but always in his favor. Two days of R&R brought him back to life.

It's a wonderment what he found to fight over. True, the neighborhood abounds at night with cats out of luck; down and outers lost, strayed or dumped after kittenhood with no hope for social security. The vicissitudes of male catdom, I would suppose, narrow down to something to eat and a willing wench. Old Red wasn't hungry, so it had to be a bit of philandering he was risking his life for — unless you're willing to believe he was fighting off invading nocturnal rodents and alligators — which I'm not. Too often I've seen a mister hawk twitching and buzzing in a life and death struggle mere inches away from Red's whiskers, a situation to be investigated by any other red-blooded cat, but not of the slightest interest to him. (Maybe he don't do insects, but he could have at least feigned a little curiosity. After all, I did, and I'm not passing myself off as a mighty hunter for a free handout.)

In all fairness, Red established his reputation, in part, by running off any other strays that wandered into the yard. It was an impressive show of territorial imperative that paid off. So it was out of keeping with his character when a young black and white cat showed up last summer and he allowed her to fish food from his bowl. Then, bold as brass, she began taking the bowl away from him. Too small to shove his feline head out of the way, she would insert a paw into the bowl instead and impudently draw it toward her. The sudden disappearance of the bowl from under his nose would baffle Old Red and while he was sorting things out, staring at the vacant spot where the bowl had been, his guest would be guzzling up the best tidbits six inches away.

The role of the little stranger wasn't apparent to us humans for some time. But I think I've come up with the answer. It's certainly no comfort in his old age — stalling his food and coyly trying to alienate him from whatever human affection is to be had. He may want us to believe she's an apprenticed rat catcher he's got in training, but there's something else I've noticed about Red: it's quite awhile since he's come home of a morning with a torn ear, a slash under the eye, and tufts of fur missing from his tail. It's months since he's lain inert for hours at a time, sprawled out like a catkin with no cat inside.

I think Old Red's lost his macho. He's tallied up the score on his lives and the odds are 1:1 with eight lives down and one to go. But Old Red is a survivor and he knows that. Chasing females is a young cat's game. The newcomer is Old Red's daisy. She's something but an old cat's darling. That Old Red's a sly old puss, you know.

Why a management team for Hendry General?

There were some eyebrows raised recently when it was reported that Hendry General Hospital had retained a management team at $95,000 a year.

Why a management team? some asked. The hospital had gotten along fine for years without one.

True, the hospital had gotten along without one. But there were serious problems facing the hospital. In 1981, the hospital had a $1.1 million negative operation, a deficit which was bridged with ad valorem taxes.

Medical, technical, and legal problems problems have increased over the years, along with the financial difficulties.

As outgoing administrator Dorothy Ridgill once remarked, sometimes it would have been nice to have a ready reference source to turn to for advice.

Hospital Management Associates, Hendry General's management team, is in the position to run HGH and to furnish the necessary expertise in a wide range of areas.

Hospital Authority members are banking that HMA will be able to 1. Improve the hospital's cash flow. 2. Cut costs. 3. Improve the general operation of the hospital.

HMA believes that with a 61 percent occupancy rate, a minimum of $200,000 in revenue over expenses could be obtained for future improvements and expansion.

In its statement of qualifications, HMA said that operating the hospital at the proper staffing level would result in savings of $350,000 per year.

HMA notes that currently Hendry General Hospital's 95 day old debts and percentage of bad debts is high when compared with many hospitals of similar size and scope of service.

HMA believes it can increase cash flow by $330,000 by reducing accounts receivable days and an additional $100,000 by reducing the bad debt from 11 percent of the total to seven percent.

In a relatively short time, HMA should be able to improve the hospital's financial standing in an amount far exceeding HMA's management fee. And that will be good news for local taxpayers who can expect improved care.

Here are some of the things that HMA has accomplished elsewhere:

✓ In a two month period, HMA turned around a 48-bed hospital in Georgia that had not paid bills in three months and had to borrow money to meet its last payroll. All past debts are now paid and the hospital has $50,000 cash in the bank.

✓ In a large hospital in Dallas, Texas, turned around a critical shortage of nursing personnel to where there is now a waiting list.

HMA has indicated that it intends to take aggressive measures to achieve a viable financial base and retain the needed medical and community support.

If it can do this, it will have more than earned its management fee.

Letter to the editor ...

Editor:

President Reagan was right when he expressed grief over the loss of their homes and possessions. As a result of serious floods at Monroe, Louisiana because of heavy rains on the lower Mississippi and he is to be commended for the provision of federal disaster relief funds.

But President Reagan is wrong in "running up" a 100 billion dollar debt, last year, because of his burgeoning military budgets that caused him to significantly raise federal taxes and federal borrowings to such an extent that there was not enough money for flood control or anything else which should be done in the country.

The Reagan-Watts Administration is blindly stereotyped in to stimulating the economy of our country solely within the mercantile.

Man not to cut down a single tree on the mountain or to disturb a single blade of grass on the prairie as the lands were deeded over by the treaty and forewarned of the devastating floods, dust storms, land slides and mud slides that would occur if they did.

Chief Buffalo Tiger said that "We only want to live here and protect the earth, before the glades are gone." A Miccosukee Indian stated that there has been approximately a delivered to individual stores. Our beautiful planet earth does not possess sufficient natural resources nor open space to institute President Reagan's absurd economic programs that wantonly waste our natural resources, covers up our country's precious open space which generates "runoff" to cause serious floods and a hectic "hurry and a scurry" way of life that is totally alien to the "olde time" ways of the South.

The best way to prevent floods is to preserve the open space that we already have. Chief Seattle forewarned the White Man not to cut down a single tree on the mountain or to disturb a single blade of grass on the prairie as the lands were deeded over by the treaty and forewarned of the devastating floods, dust storms, land slides and mud slides that would occur if they did.

Man not to cut down a single tree on the mountain or to disturb a single blade of grass on the prairie as the lands were deeded over by the treaty and forewarned of the devastating floods, dust storms, land slides and mud slides that would occur if they did.

35% reduction in the population of bird life in the everglades since the Tamiami "flood gates" were closed in 1962. I believe that it would be wise if a Miccosukee Indian Reservation was created out of 200,000 acres of everglades that are now managed by the State of Florida because they will preserve the pristine environment by preventing the opportunistic developers from wrecking the sawgrass water prairies.

A Miccosukee said that the waters of the everglades are regularly herbicide or pesticide contamination, then the farmer is promptly told to stop using it. A key deer recently walked out on a hiking trail at Shark Valley and died because it was covered with mites as a result of being forced into the high waters of the glades by developers' bulldozers. A ranger said that 98 percent of the eggs of alligator nests were flooded out this summer because the Tamiami "flood gates" allowed too much water to flow through.

Many people indeed believe that development has been too rapid and they support an immediate "building moratorium" for the entire eastern coast of Florida in order to have time to assess the impact upon the environment such as the dead or dying Miami coral reefs as a result of the too much water pollution over the last 25 years, flood problems associated with development, shortages of water in the glades that have caused salt water intrusions into the aquifers under the city of Miami, among others.

Getting results

Every now and then you'll notice a little ad in our paper that says, "Try our classifieds, they work for you."

They really do. This is no inflated advertising claim. In recent weeks, I have run classified ads to sale 1. Used photo equipment and 2. Furniture.

Within one week after the ads ran, I had sold two cameras and an enlarger, plus all of the furniture.

I recall once that the folks out at Crooked Hook Campground ran a tiny U-pick classified (for beans I think). That weekend, their field was over-run with U-pickers.

If you have something to sell, the price is right, and it's something other folks might want, the place to sell it is in the classifieds.

But don't blame us if your item doesn't meet this criteria. After all, if you have something that no one else wants, all the advertising in the world isn't going to help you.

For instance, I've been trying to sell 55 gallon used ink drums for the past week, but have had no takers.

The price is right, but the thought of cleaning the ink residue out of the barrels is scary. I wouldn't want to do it.

Once the ink gets on your clothes, you might as well try to blast it out with dynamite as wash it. Maybe some of the dry cleaners can do better.

Just working around here I've managed to get just about everything I own spotted with ink somewhere, and I don't even have the fun of working on the press.

One of the best things about our classifieds is that you get four newspapers for the price of one. Your classified runs in The Clewiston News, the Herald-Observer, the Glades County Democrat, and the Caloosa Belle in LaBelle.

If there is anyone who wants what you have to sell, one of these newspapers, tailored to the community they serve, will bring it to their attention.

The classifieds are one of the best read parts of the paper. Often, you can find out a lot there, such as who is moving out of town (house for sale), and who is getting divorced (I'll no longer be responsible for any debts other than my own).

Some companies, recognizing the readership potential of the classifieds, use them exclusively. Sometimes the classified pages are too attractive. We try to weed out ads which promise you'll get rich quick, and others along that line.

Each individual classified might be small, but they are mighty as well.

Now, if I can just find a buyer for those old ink drums.

50 miles of dike to be repaired

A 50-mile stretch of the Herbert Hoover Dike reaching from Port Mayaca to Moore Haven is to be rebuilt and repaired during the next 18 months.

According to "Water Management Bulletin," published by the South Florida Water Management District, the bidding contracts also call for placing a stone revetment on the dike to prevent erosion caused by waves generated by storms and boats.

The first contract covers only a four-mile stretch including one mile of Pahokee State Park and three miles on LD-9 Reach No. 1. The estimated cost is $7 million.

The shoreline for the 50-mile total project, SFWMD reported, has been divided into five reaches with priorities assigned according to the severity of erosion. Because of severe erosion at the Pahokee State Park, it was given top priority.

The increase in lake stages from 15.5 to 17.5 feet is reportedly the reason for the erosion between Port Mayaca and Moore Haven. Trees are being uprooted along the lakeside and falling into the waterway, creating a hazard to navigation as well as destroying the existing revetment. Removing the trees leaves holes, causing further erosion.

Since 1978 the shoreline in the area has receded some 25 to 30 feet, the Bulletin reported.

Management help needed by City of Pahokee

Once again, the Pahokee City Council is giving lip service to the idea of hiring administrative help for the city.

We hope they do more than just talk about it.

There probably isn't a person on the council or a citizen who attends the council meetings on a regular basis who isn't aware of the urgent need for effective management in Pahokee.

City Clerk Betty McCoy put aptly when she said "City business is big business. It's a multi-million dollar business."

The multi-million dollar business of the City of Pahokee is, by and large, in the hands of McCoy and several part-time council members who have full-time jobs and families of their own.

They cannot be expected to effectually administer the city's business on a day-to-day basis.

Almost all of the council members have expressed agreement that an administrative head of some sort should be hired.

But since October 1981, the council has been hiding behind the skirts of a "referendum" in which the few citizens who cared to vote narrowly defeated the city manager concept.

Prior to that vote, the city council members were say the referendum was a "non-binding straw vote." The results would help guide the council in its efforts to bring in a city manager type of government.

But after less than half of the Pahokee voters even cared to go to the polls to vote on the proposal, the "straw vote" became the excuse for inaction. The council decided the voters had spoken and they weren't prepared to take the political consequences of going against the voters' wishes.

So money that was budgeted for a city manager sat idle in the city coffers until some other use was found. In the meantime, the city spent more money than necessary in several cases because of mismanagemnt. Or, more precisely, lack of professional management.

We feel the city council members have been hiding long enough behind the "straw poll" or "referendum," or whatever they chose to call it in any given circumstance.

Pahokee needs administrative management and the council should take the necessary action to hire one. In the long run, it will save the city money and headaches.

Citizens who object on the basis of tradition or uncertainty will be silenced when saved revenues result in increased municipal services.

20 YEARS AGO THE BELLE GLADE HERALD JANUARY 17, 1963

Belle Glade Police Chief Charles Goodlett and a work crew of city prisoners finished the work of two-laning the Second Street Bridge.

Various administrations of the city had discussed plans to build the bridge over a period of years.

Goodlett and his unpaid laborers finally accomplished the task at a cost to the taxpayers of $7,000, a good price even in 1963.

30 YEARS AGO THE BELLE GLADE HERALD JANUARY 16, 1933

The most expensive strawberries ever auctioned off on the platform of South Bay Growers Cooperative was a quart of strawberries which brought $115.

The proceeds from the strawberry sale were slated to go toward funding missionary work in Japan, where Tom Watson Jr., formerly the manager of WSWN Radio Station, was working for the Evangelical Alliance Mission.

The berries were grown by Mrs. Harry Smith of Chosen, who said she wanted to make a contribution to mission work.

Smith, sales manager of South Bay Growers, conducted the auction. They were bought by Max Beverly and Roland Bramble, both of Canal Point.

40 YEARS THE EVERGLADES NEWS JANUARY 15, 1943

A two-square mile area of Lake Okeechobee was scheduled to be used for a bombing range by Naval pilots based in Fort Lauderdale.

Only non-explosive bombs would be dropped on the area, located 5.25 miles north of Lake Harbor and 2.5 miles west of Kraemer Island.

The area was to be left open to navigation except during bombing practice. Boaters were to be warned off by aircraft "zooming a safe distance to the side".

50 YEARS AGO THE PAHOKEE NEWS AND PHILOSOPHY JANUARY 19, 1933

Pahokee residents were bucking a trend during the great depression when they started discussing the possibility of building a 100 foot wide boulevard.

Pahokee's "boom" was coming at a time when many cities were folding up streets and disappearing.

The suggestion was made by Dr. W.H. Lair, who suggested the city council adopt a resolution which would forbid granting permits for the erection of buildings within 50 feet of the centerline of the Pahokee-Canal Point Road.

The area was receiving the benefit of a sugar industry which was employing between 900 and 1,000 men to cut cane in the field in the Canal Point area.

The cutters were harvesting 2,000 tons of cane a day and were sending 75 carloads rolling to Clewiston every day to be converted to raw sugar in the United States Sugar Corporation's mill there.

A total of 6,300 acres of cane were being harvested in the Canal Point area while another 1,800 were being planted in cane for the next season.

FPL will actually pay you to conserve electricity four ways:

Our Cooling & Heating Incentive. FPL will pay up to several hundred dollars towards the cost of having an older, inefficient air conditioning system or heat pump replaced with a qualifying high efficiency system.

Our Ceiling Insulation Incentive. FPL will pay up to $300 towards the cost of having ceiling insulation installed.

Our Water Heating Incentive. FPL will pay up to several hundred dollars towards the cost of having an inefficient water heater modified or replaced with a solar water heater, water heating heat pump or heat recovery system.

Our Solar Film Incentive. FPL will pay up to $150 towards the cost of having solar-reflective film installed.

To qualify for the last three incentives, work must first be recommended by an FPL Home Energy Audit.

Will everyone benefit from Watt-Wise incentives? Yes.

These incentives are less costly than the oil necessary to generate the electricity wasted by inefficient homes. Every 600 kilowatt-hours of electricity not used is a barrel of oil no one has to pay for. This also helps us postpone the building of expensive power plants. The less oil we use, and the less new building we have to do, the more we can help hold the line on everyone's electric bill.

For more information on how to qualify or to arrange for a Home Energy Audit, send us the coupon or call the Watt-Wise Line at 1-800-432-6563.

Lady Gator basketball team wins 1, loses 1

BELLE GLADE-The Glades Day School girls' basketball team split its two games last week to finish the week at a 3-2 record.

The Gators beat the Moore Haven Terriers last Tuesday, January 11, 41-34.

The Terriers jumped to an early lead, outscoring the Gators eight to five in the first quarter and 11 to 10 in the second.

The Gators came back in the second half to take a seven point victory.

They took a 27-23 lead at the end of the third quarter and outscored the Terriers 14-11 in the final period to claim the victory.

Judi Austin led the team with 11 points, followed by Melanie Swager and Jamie Wills with eight points apiece. Rhonda Hudson hit for seven.

Lauralee Green scored five and Marilyn Thompson scored two.

The Terriers' high scorer was Velma Thompson, with 17.

"We actually did to Moore Haven what we could have done to King's Academy," said Coach Mandy Perez. King's beat the Gators 31-17 later that week.

The Gators never really got into the game. They came back from halftime behind 7-19. They quickly picked up five points to make it a seven point game, 24-17, but King's shut the Gators out in the fourth period to walk away with the victory.

"Our third quarter we came out and we pressed them and we cut the lead down to seven points.

We just weren't ready to play them," said Perez.

"I'm looking forward to the rematch."

The Gators aren't off to as fast a start that Perez had hoped, and Perez thinks part of the reason is the loss of last year's two top scorers.

Kelly Teets graduated, and Angee Adams, a senior this year, has been out all season due to injuries she received in an automobile accident over Christmas break.

Perez said that, at the most, Adams may be back for the final three games of the season and the district tournament.

"We're just not the same team as last year," Adams, he said. He added that the team may be doing the younger members a disservice by giving them playing time.

"It's probably bad to look at it that way. It could be a better team for it. By the time we come up, we might be a stronger team. We're playing time some of those kids have."

The Gators 3-2 record isn't that bad, considering they were 4-1 after five games, but they are in the worst possible situation, they are 1-1.

"That's what we are," said Perez. "We're just not the same team as last year."

Perez added.

Melanie Swager has blocked 11 shots in the first five games and has hit 12 of 22 shots.

The team as a whole has been shooting 37.7 percent.

"She's playing good defense, she's been a real pleasant surprise this year," said Swager.

Jamie Wills leads the team with an 8.2 average. Judi Austin has scored a 7.8 average. Swager is the team's top scorer with 25 points, a five point game.

Wills is also leading the team with 45-40 and Summit Christian center defeated the Gators 40-44.

THE UP WITH PEOPLE advance team consists of, Hardy, Scott Ward and Martamaria Leal.

Up With People to appear at Hand Center

Up With People Shows are known for their energy.

Audiences usually leave their performances impressed with the production and splash of a show which features numbers that represent cultures from all over the world.

Few members of the audience take the time though to learn anything more about the cast or the show's production company than what they read in press releases about giving young people a learning experience and building bridges of understanding and communication.

Up With People is not just another musical show to the typical audience member.

After the show, all that talk about building bridges of communication and understanding between peoples, cultures and countries is forgotten after the show is over.

Not to the show's cast members. They don't lose sight of the organization's stated goals through the glitter of the production itself, if the three members of the show who are currently in Belle Glade are any indication.

Martamaria Leal, 20, Scott Ward, 18, and Lisa Hardy, 21, make up the advance crew for the Up With People cast that will perform at Dolly Hand Cultural Arts Center next Thursday, January 27 and Friday, January 28.

Their job is to inform the public what Up With People is about and to compile a composite of the area to inform other cast members what the Glades is about.

When the show prepares to move on, Leal, Ward and Hardy will move with it. Another advance team will take its place. Every cast member is given a chance to take part in the advance work, they said.

Five Up With People casts are touring the world, and each cast has about 120 members.

The advance work is part of the education and bridge building process.

The three said the organization and its travels exposes them to different cultures and helps them to build a better understanding with that culture.

"In my home town, it's about 90 percent Catholic," said Leal, who comes from Monterrey, Mexico. "But in the group, there are people from all over the world. There are Buddhists and other different religions. We all get along fine."

She said she didn't know anything about Up With People until her family hosted a group from one of the casts that performed in her home town.

She was impressed by the way the members of the cast got along with each other.

"I thought, 'Wow, I can't even get along with the people in my school, and they can get along with each other,'" said Leal.

The members of each cast work together in almost every aspect of the show.

Pratt and Whitney Aircraft has provided a grant to Palm Glades Girl Scout Council to fund this program.

Double Dutch rope, rule books and training for coaches and participants is provided.

The clinic will be held in the Glades Central gymnasium from 2 to 4:30 p.m.

The clinic is free and is open to girls and boys from grades 5 through 12th.

The clinic includes training on the hows of Double Dutch jump rope. It will also provide practice time and team formation.

Ms. Fran Burke, Double Dutch Coordinator for the Girl Scout Council said Double Dutch promotes teamwork and physical fitness while having fun in the process.

"We have eight tons of equipment which we set up," said Hardy, of Bend, Oregon. "Even the girls. We set it up before the show and strike it down after it's over. We don't have trailers."

The shows themselves include numbers and dances that are composed and choreographed by a staff employed by the non-profit, independent organization.

Each member of the cast that comes to Belle Glade will receive a packet detailing the impressions of the advance team's members.

Leal, Ward and Hardy have been talking to civic clubs and meeting business and municipal leaders the past couple weeks to get the details for their packet.

The packet will include information regarding the area's major industries, the various ethnic backgrounds present in the Glades and any major problems the group perceives among the people.

Leal stressed that the group isn't entering the area looking for problems and trying to solve them. The packet is designed to give cast members a more complete understanding of the area.

"It's probably one of the most unique small cities in the country," said Ward. "You go into a city not as a town, but as a group and a culture to learn about."

Ward said he first got interested in Up With People when it performed in Chicago, his home.

"The energy of it," said Ward. "It just blew me away. It's a very, very professional show. I'd never seen a show quite like it."

Five casts of about 120 members each are pulled out of 7,000 applicants each year. Talent is not a requirement, according to Hardy. The organization will teach them the fundamentals and, perhaps most importantly, how to get along with other people.

"He couldn't dance when we started," said Hardy of Ward. "Now he does. I could never have talked to anyone like I am now. I was shy. But, you have to open up."

All three said Up With People offers them opportunities and opens up fields that they may otherwise not have been exposed to.

"You can never tell," said Ward. "Maybe someone in the cast will see that sugar industry and decide, 'Wow, I'd like to get into that.'"

The 1983-84 edition of Up With People will be formed in the summer. The groups will take the first month to learn the shows and will tour for the next 11 months, taking a two week break at Christmas time.

Tickets for the January 27 and 28 shows are on sale at the Chambers of Commerce in Pahokee, Belle Glade and Clewiston. Tickets are $25 and $10.

All proceeds will go to the Arthritis Foundation.

The members of the cast of "Up With People" need a place to stay while performing in the Glades area, according to Barbara Clark, Glades area coordinator for the Arthritis Foundation.

Anyone interested in hosting a member of the "Up With People" cast can call Deris Wetherington at 924-5604 in Pahokee, Don Fleish at 996-7356 in Belle Glade or Barbara Clark at 983-5387 in Clewiston.

BELLE GLADE—The Glades Central Community School Class of '73 will have a class meeting Sunday, Jan. 23 at 4 p.m., at the ed up by four o'clock and we would wake back most of the way home because the lake was low. We swam the canal and we were home. This was a distance of about a mile and a half. Daddy would usually walk until almost dark. He would pole the boat up the canal and we would sit in it; then, he would wait for Uncle Mays to come out of their produce on the boat. They hauled a lot of beans from the island to the mainland.

We had started school when we came back near the end of 1926 and finished the term in the spring of '27. We went the school year of 1927-'28. The school was right out here in what is now my front yard. The school teacher, Mrs. Hughes, lived with her husband and little boy on a house boat on the Bolles Canal, three miles away. Every morning, she rowed herself and her boy in a little row boat the three miles, tied it to the bridge and they walked to school in the afternoon after school they walked back to the boat and towed home. She and her husband, Mr. Hughes, had just moved the houseboat south of the bridge here a week before the new term of school was due to start for the 1928-'29 school year. The lake was down to 13 feet in the summer but it rained 13.57 feet between the school and 31st of August and September it had rained almost every day so the lake was over to foot elevation.

THE HURRICANE STRIKES

My folks went to West Palm Beach on Saturday, September 11, 1933 to buy our school clothes. The new term of school was due to start on the following Monday.

The Huffman Construction Company, under contract to the State, was finally building a highway from South Bay to Clewiston. A big dipper dredge was working a half mile west of the Miami Locks. On this Saturday, because it was something new, almost all the boys were there watching the operation of the dredge that was driving piling across the South Florida Conservation drainage canal. It began to drizzle in the afternoon and the men knocked off and went to their house boats. We went home and found that our folks had come home from West Palm Beach. They had been told that an oncoming hurricane was in no danger of turning toward the Glades.

Clarence Lee and his wife lived in a house about 200 feet northeast of our house. They talked about going to South Bay which they did the next day, which was Sunday. Nobody really expected a bunch of raw peanuts, came back, and boiled them about the middle of the afternoon. Everybody came over to eat them. The wind was really beginning to blow and you could see the wave action over the little mud dikes which protected the mangroves at that time. Everybody had enjoyed the peanuts and just before dark they picked a house for everybody to go and take refuge in. They picked V.F. Thrift's, the caretaker's house. Everybody except Uncle Minor went there. He stayed in our house to look after things. By the time we got to Mr. Thrift's, the wind was down a few deep and rising.

Apparently the old mud dike, five to eight feet high and about forty feet thick at the base, had been breached by the lake and washed away.

The house was a good four feet off the ground. By the time all the families had got in, the water was rising. The tide that was coming into the house. They put all the small kids on the table in the kitchen as we went in the back door. The water continued to rise until it was half-way up the windows and rising more.

In the Thrifts house, which was large, there was in addition to Mr. Thrift, Mrs. Thrift, four family, the W.H. Woods family, a Swede, Karl Haranach and several other people. The rest were colored. I don't know how many there were. Mr. Will reports that there were 21 whites and 42 blacks. The colored people were in the front part of the house and they went through a hole in the ceiling. Some of the whites went through the same hole. My family all went through a hole in the kitchen. By the time all of us got up in the ceiling the water was over the windows.

The wind was howling and when there was a small lull you could hear the black people singing, praying and crying. The weather picked up and the house was moving. Of course, I didn't know what was happening as I was only 13 years old but I was told later that the house floated off the piling and water came up in the attic.

Mr. Thrift and Uncle Minor looked some of the men standing on the roof, Daddy got up and was pulling a piece of tin off the roof and the wind blew him off the roof. That was the last he saw of the house. He came up swimming on top of the water and came in contact with a telephone pole. He hung on to the pole and the water was holding him up. That's how high it was. As the wind slackened and the water receded, he slid down the pole and hung on there all night. Mr. Thrift got up after Daddy and took him into the house. He reached out and grabbed someone else to pull put and it happened to be me. He and his wife straddled the top of the house and he pushed me up there. He was trying to get other people out of the house when the house disappeared altogether.

It was pitch dark and you couldn't see anybody praying and crying. Everybody toward the other houses, which would have been east of this house that we were in. I don't know how long I had been trying to swim until I bumped into some floating timber. I decided to hang on, which I did for the rest of the night. The wind and the water blew me south of the old Sebring Farm. Eventually, the timber I was holding on to and trying to ride stopped moving as the water got shallow. I tried to push them and couldn't so I crawled up on them and pulled a little old sweater, that I had on, up over my head as the wind and the rain were blowing so hard against me. I sat there until daylight.

After daylight I attempted to walk back north. The water here was about knee deep and as I walked the water got deeper. After some hard wading I saw three people off to my right. I was alone, standing in the water, waiting for them. They finally heard me and it turned out to be Roy Boots, Vernie Boots and Willie Boots. They waited on me and they thought, until I got there, that I was their fourth brother. It turned out that he was lost. We waded together and we finally saw the telephone pole that towered over the Miami Canal and then the royal palms at the Bolles Hotel. We kept going toward the hotel because we figured it must be standing, which it was. We came out on the old highway about a half mile from the Miami Canal. We came out near where Mrs. Larrick lives today. There were not any houses there at that time but we came out to a house south of the road where there were no waters had floated south, back about a fourth of a mile, from the old highway. In this house, Mr. and Mrs. Larrick and their family and old Mr. Burt Little and his son survived the storm. The house had floated off its blocks on Sebring Farm. It floated a quarter of a mile, and it had floated to the storm with the people in it. We walked up to the house and met up with these people and they were chewing sugar cane that Mr. Tatum was trying to grow for old Southern Sugar, which is U.S. Sugar today. We chewed some cane with them. The men folks had waded out and gone to the Bolles Hotel and Lake Harbor to see if they could find a boat. They did find a boat and Mr. Lee brought it back to pick up his wife and small children.

We waded up the ditch from the house to Road 27 which was right where Mrs. Larrick's house is today which would be half way to the middle of section one. We were watching while the men were trying to get the boat tied so everybody could get in it. I heard someone call my name. I looked up and saw my daddy across the canal. I jumped in and swam across to him. I was glad to see him and he was glad to see me. He had been looking for members of our family. He thought that we were all lost until he saw me. The Boots boys went to the Bolles Hotel and Daddy and I went back to the old Sebring Farm. We met Uncle Minor Thoms searching for members of the family and hadn't found anybody. He had gone up in the attic of the "strong side" house and the water rose. It was big enough for me, my brother and him to sleep up there as we always did. The attic had broken loose from the house. He got out on top of it and it floated across the road and stopped. He sat straddle of it that night. We then met up with Mr. Thrift and the group of us which had come from the boat and found a boat. We went back to the old Bolles Hotel to spend the night. It was open to everybody who could squeeze in. We went to sleep on the floor. Some of the women had beds, of the few beds that were available, and the men slept on the floor. We made do with what little we had to eat. Most of the crew that were on the construction job had survived and they had gone down and salvaged the canned goods that was on their cook boat. They tried to feed people with what little they could find.

The caretaker of the hotel which was being remodeled had at first refused to let people in. Someone persuaded him to change his mind and when we arrived I did not see him around. I think he had been sent away.

In the meantime some of the commercial fishermen got some of their boats running so they could go out to Clewiston. On Monday, after the hurricane, some of the men in Clewiston put boats together there. Jim Beardsley and Dean Diffen were among those who came out to check on everybody at Lake Harbor. They took some people back to Clewiston and brought back food for Mrs. Hamilton, who was the lock tender, took over the kitchen and tried to head things up at the old Bolles Hotel.

That morning after the storm, as people were grimly searching for the lost in the waters, old Mr. Callahan, who was one of his two sons, who he lived alone down below Lake Harbor, the house was about to fall down but it had somehow withstood the storm. The old man got out on the roadway and was walking along. He was so deaf he could hardly hear. He saw everybody searching in the water but he said nothing. He said to him he would cup his hand to his ear and say, "Eh?" Not being able to understand them. Finally, looking around him he asked, "What in the hell is going on?"

He shouted, "We had a hurricane. Where are you going?"

He yelled, "I'm going down to the post office to see if I got some mail."

They told him, "There ain't no post office. It's gone."

Miss Maude Wingfield's store had been blown away. She and her husband had been on the boat. The house was about to fall down but it had somehow withstood the storm. The old man got out on the roadway and was walking along. He was so deaf he could hardly hear. He saw everybody searching in the water but he said nothing. He said to him he would cup his hand to his ear and say, "Eh?" Not being able to understand them. Finally, looking around him he asked, "What in the hell is going on?"

He shouted, "We had a hurricane. Where are you going?"

He yelled, "I'm going down to the post office to see if I got some mail."

They told him, "There ain't no post office. It's gone."

We found all of our family on Tuesday. Uncle Mays and Auntie Berne were found up on a rocky reef which is just out of Clewiston and my daddy found a fisherman there who had his motor boat running and they went out and got the seine boat with the bodies on it and towed it in.

The pine coffins were then taken from Clewiston by trucks to Ortona Locks under the supervision of Glenn Frierson and others who lived at Liberty Point. The cemetery was over there on the other side of Moore Haven. We buried the dead that night at 12:00 o'clock. Later on my daddy went back and had cypress wood crosses erected. The names of each person was on a cypress cross which is just out of Clewiston. The place clean and the markers up. In 1943 I put permanent markers there.

Robert Bowen and Gena Reeves

The attendants of the wedding ceremony were dressed in formal gowns of floor length with softly draped asymmetrical empire bodice and sheer chiffon capes. The bride wore a gown that coordinated with the bride's bouquet. Rodi Bowen of Tallahassee, brother of the groom, served as best man. Groomsman were Bert Barnes of Belle Glade, Douglas Ingram, brother of the bride, Tequesta, and Jeffrey Rupe of Winter Haven.

All attendants including the father of the groom were attired in silver gray tuxedos. The mother of the bride wore a street length deep purple chiffon dress and her corsage was a white orchid.

A program of nuptial music was presented by Nancy Carstens, accompanied by Dr. Butterworth at the organ. Kim Riblett was in charge of attendance.

A reception followed in the church social hall.

The groom is employed by Harris Electronics of Melbourne. The bride is employed by Iveys Department Store in the Melbourne Square Mall.

The couple honeymooned in Central Florida and are now making their home at 1225 N. Wickham road in Melbourne.
